Summary for the owner

The worst cell, a critical finding that anyone can find in a minute, is empty. Three critical issues will be found by anyone who spends an hour with the registers and a day with the archives. The greatest damage comes from connecting them: the earlier insolvency, loans from a related company, a shareholder with an untraceable owner and a party donation in the year of a municipal contract. Do six tasks this week.

Financial statements for 2023 and 2024 are missing from the Collection of Deeds

The last published financial statements are for 2022. The law requires publication within 12 months after the end of the accounting period, so two are missing. An investor opens the Collection of Deeds among the first things and, in connection with findings N-16 and N-17, will want to know why the numbers are hidden for exactly the years when a new shareholder came in and the loans arrived.

Attack line

“The company has not published its numbers for two years, right since outside money came in. What is it hiding?”

Recommendation

Fix it. File both statements in the Collection of Deeds and put them first in the investor's documentation, together with an overview of the contributions and loans from findings N-16 and N-17.

A contract for the Dolní Lhota Municipal Office split into two orders just below the tender threshold

The Contract Register holds two 2024 orders from the Dolní Lhota Municipal Office for repairing the town hall roof: EUR 19,500 and EUR 19,000, signed three weeks apart, with the same subject. The town's internal directive, which is also public, requires inviting several bidders from EUR 20,000. Splitting is not illegal in itself, but it looks like getting around the rules, and together with finding N-18 it takes on a different dimension.

Attack line

“They got the town's contract without a tender; all it took was cutting it into two orders.”

Recommendation

Prepare an explanation. Prepare a documented explanation of why the repair was split (stages, emergency condition, change of scope) and have it ready for the investor too. In future, insist on one contract and a tender with public clients, even when the client does not require it.

Employee training subsidy: EUR 5,000 returned for an unmet indicator

The public subsidy register lists an employee training project from 2022 to 2023 worth EUR 44,000 with a record of EUR 5,000 returned because the company did not reach the number of trained persons. It is a routine correction, not a penalty for fraud, but without an explanation it looks like a problem with subsidies.

Attack line

“They had to return a subsidy. Look at everything they take public money for.”

Recommendation

Prepare an explanation. Keep a one-sentence explanation ready (two employees left during the project) and the proof of repayment. Do nothing else.

Final judgment: a lost EUR 48,000 dispute with a subcontractor

In 2023 the regional court ruled with final effect that the company must pay Gama Roofing Supplies s.r.o. EUR 48,000 for completed work, plus interest. The judgment can be found publicly in the database of court decisions, and the web archive still holds your earlier public statement about it (finding N-06).

Attack line

“They do not pay their subcontractors. It took a court to make them.”

Recommendation

Prepare an explanation. Prepare a short, truthful explanation and proof of payment. For the investor, keep an overview of all disputes from the last five years with their outcome, including disputes of the connected companies from layer 8.

The web archive keeps your 2021 page calling the subcontractor an “unreliable partner”

The Wayback Machine holds a November 2021 version of your website with a News section in which the company describes the dispute with Gama Roofing Supplies s.r.o., calls it an “unreliable partner” and writes that “we will prevail in court”. You deleted the page in 2023 and lost the case (finding N-04). The archive keeps the text, and anyone can put it next to the judgment.

Attack line

“First they smeared a partner in public, then lost to them in court. They deleted the page; the archive did not.”

Recommendation

Prepare an explanation. Do not try to have the archive deleted; it responds slowly to removal requests and flags them. Keep the explanation ready together with the response to finding N-04 and do not write publicly about disputes in future.

Attack line

“Just start typing their name and Google itself suggests the word fraud.”

Recommendation

Fix it. Address the causes (N-07, N-15) and strengthen the content people look for: references, case studies, reviews. The suggestion can be reported to Google, but it returns unless the causes change.

ChatGPT claims the company went through insolvency in 2017. It merges it with the predecessor company

Asked “What do you know about Sample Company s.r.o.?”, ChatGPT answered that the company “went through insolvency in 2017”. It was the dissolved Sample Roofing s.r.o., with the same managing director and address (finding N-15), that went through insolvency, not your company. The answer is factually wrong but has a real basis, which makes it harder to refute. Gemini and Perplexity answer correctly.

Attack line

“Even artificial intelligence knows they went bust once.”

Recommendation

Fix it. Publish accurate company details (company ID, year of formation, management) on the website in a structured form and report the error through feedback in ChatGPT. Check again in a month. Without the explanation for finding N-15 the answer will keep coming back.

Attack line

Directory listing is on, and Google offers the file for a query with the company name and the word “price list”. Whoever has it can push on price, approach your customers with a better offer, or threaten you with it.

Attack line

Predecessor company of the same director: bankrupt in 2017

Sample Roofing s.r.o. (struck off in 2019) had the same managing director and the same premises address as your company. Bankruptcy was declared in 2017, creditors filed claims of EUR 170,000 and received 11 percent. The domain samplecompany.example was created in 2016, the web archive from that year shows the logo “Sample Roofing, now Sample Company s.r.o.”, and today's website says “on the market since 2006”, the year the dissolved company was formed. Anyone who enters the managing director's name in the Insolvency Register finds the connection. The pattern “the business goes on, the debts stay behind” is exactly what an investor and creditors look for.

Attack line

“They already left creditors with four million in debts once and carried on the next day under a new name. Why would they not do it again?”

Recommendation

Prepare an explanation. Prepare a complete and truthful account for the investor: what happened in 2017, what passed from the predecessor (people, customers, brand), what did not (debts, liabilities), and whether the transfer was challenged in the insolvency proceedings. Change “on the market since 2006” to “building on experience since 2006, a limited company since 2011”. Hide nothing; the connection can be found in an hour.

The new shareholder from 2024 has an untraceable owner

In March 2024, Alfa Invest Holding s.r.o. joined the company with a contribution of EUR 120,000 for a 25 percent share. According to the register it was formed in November 2023, has no employees or website, and its sole shareholder is a foreign company from a jurisdiction where owners are not publicly recorded. The register of beneficial owners lists only a substitute beneficial owner, that is the company's management, not the real owner. It is a signal, not an accusation; but a future investor and its bank will see it first when checking the origin of funds.

Attack line

“Three million from a four-month-old shell whose owner nobody knows. Where does the money come from?”

Recommendation

Prepare an explanation. Obtain from the shareholder documentation of the beneficial owner and the origin of the contribution (extract, declaration, agreement) before the investor or the bank asks. If the shareholder refuses to document it, expect it to stop the investor's entry.

The notes to the 2022 financial statements show liabilities of EUR 85,000 to Sample Property Management s.r.o., where the same managing director is the sole shareholder, with no information on interest or maturity. The report on related-party relations is missing from the Collection of Deeds. Between companies of the same people this is common, but without documentation it looks like money being shifted around.

Attack line

The 2024 annual financial report of the Party for the Region lists a donation of EUR 2,000 from Sample Property Management s.r.o. (same managing director). The mayor of Dolní Lhota was elected for this party, and in the same year the town awarded your company the town hall roof repair as two orders without a tender (finding N-02). Each item on its own is legal and public. Together they form a “donation for a contract” story that can be written in an hour and takes years to refute.

The public register shows the managing director as a board member or shareholder of four other companies: property management (findings N-17 and N-18), two dormant companies and one in liquidation since 2025 with no creditor claims. A namesake on the board of a company with enforcement proceedings has a different date of birth and company ID and was ruled out. In the annex to the order in the Contract Register, that company is listed as the subcontractor for sheet metal work on the Dolní Lhota town hall (finding N-02). Neither the annual report nor the related-party report mentions it. It is not prohibited, but it is an undisclosed conflict of interest that both an investor and a public client see as a risk.

Attack line

Since June 2026, the public profile of a company worker has carried a photo from a construction site with a signed contract for work lying in view: the customer's name, the address of the family house and the price of EUR 56,000 are legible. The post tags the company and anyone who browses the profiles tagged on the company account will find it. It is a leak of the customer's personal data that can be used against the company and against the customer. We do not name the worker; it is a process failure, not a check on a person.

Attack line

“Your company put my address and what I paid on the internet. Either we sort this out, or I take it to the authority.”

Recommendation

Remove it or request removal. Ask the worker to delete the post, inform the customer and assess the notification duty with the attorney. Introduce a simple rule for site photos (no documents, number plates or faces without consent) and review the profiles tagged on the company account.

Prepared responses

For every critical and latent finding, a short and truthful response for a journalist, an investor or a customer. Check each one before use: it must match the facts exactly. You fill in the places marked in yellow.

N-04

 Critical

Lost dispute with a subcontractor

Finding on page 5

When they ask

“A court ordered you to pay a subcontractor 1.2 million. Do you not pay your partners?”

Response

It was a dispute over the quality of work on one project from 2021. The court decided differently than we expected. We respected the judgment and paid the full amount on [payment date]. We work with our other subcontractors long term and without disputes, and we are happy to provide references.

N-10

 Critical

Compromised subdomain

Finding on page 8

When they ask

“Links from your domain lead to fraudulent pages. How is that possible?”

Response

It was an old test address that we stopped using in 2019 and forgot to shut down. An attacker misused it. After finding out, we shut it down on [date] and checked our other systems. [Fill in after checking with the web administrator: whether customer data was stored there.]

N-15

 Critical

Insolvency of the predecessor company

Finding on page 11

When they ask

“Your previous company went bankrupt and creditors got eleven percent. Now you trade under a new name. Why should we trust you?”

Response

Sample Roofing s.r.o. ended in 2017 after [reason, fill in according to the facts]. Sample Company s.r.o. was formed back in 2011 as a separate company and took over the brand, the people and the customers, not the liabilities; the insolvency trustee did not challenge the transfer [fill in according to the file]. Since then the company has paid on time, which we can document with financial statements and subcontractor references.

When to use it: Investor, bank, media

N-01

■ ■ Latent

Missing 2023 and 2024 accounts

Finding on page 4

When they ask

“Why are two years of your financial statements missing from the Collection of Deeds?”

Response

It was an administrative error when we changed accounting firms in 2023. Both statements were properly prepared and we filed them on [filing date]. We are happy to present them with a commentary.

Who speaks: Managing director or finance director

When to use it: Investor, bank, media

■ ■ Latent

Split contract for Dolní
Lhota

When they ask

“The town of Dolní Lhota gave you the town hall repair without a tender, as two orders below the limit. Did you arrange it?”

Response

The town set the scope: the first order covered the emergency part of the roof, the second the rest after the covering was removed [fill in according to the facts]. Both prices match the [itemised budget], which we are happy to present. The client decides how it awards work; we submitted a bid at its invitation.

N-07

■ ■ Latent

Wave of one-star reviews

Finding on page 7

When they ask

“Why have you had so many bad reviews recently?”

Response

Most of those ratings came within three weeks from accounts with no other activity, so we reported them to Google. We reply to every genuine experience by name. In the last year we completed [number] projects and verified customers rate us [rating] on average.

Who speaks: Marketing or managing director

When to use it: Customer, social media

N-08

■ ■ Latent

Autocomplete suggests
“fraud”

Finding on page 7

When they ask

“When someone types your name, Google suggests the word fraud. Why?”

Response

Autocomplete shows what people search for, not what is true. It relates to a wave of anonymous ratings that we reported, and to the 2017 insolvency of a different company, which we explain openly. We are happy to give you contacts of customers from recent years.

N-11

■ ■ Latent

DMARC protection missing

Finding on page 9

When they ask

“We received an invoice from your address with a different account number. Did you send it?”

Response

We did not. We never change account numbers by e-mail, and every change is confirmed by phone. We secured the domain against spoofed messages on [date]. If you receive a similar message, please call [phone].

Who speaks: Accountant or managing director

When to use it: Customers, bank

Internal price list with margins in Google's index

Finding on page 9

When they ask

“Your internal price list with margins was publicly accessible. How?”

Response

The file got into a public folder of the website by mistake during [circumstance] and stayed there for [period]. After finding out, we removed it on [date], including from search engines. The terms with our customers do not change, and we explained the situation to each of them personally.

Who speaks: Managing director

Exposed key to the SMS gateway

Finding on page 10

When they ask

“Customers are receiving text messages in your name with a payment link. Did you send them?”

Response

We did not. We found that the access key to our SMS gateway had remained in a file of a former supplier, and we revoked it on [date]. We never request payments by text message. If you received such a message, do not pay anything and call us on [phone].

Who speaks: Managing director or web administrator

When to use it: Customer

N-14

■ ■ Latent

Expired ISO 9001 certificate

Finding on page 10

When they ask

“You show ISO 9001, but your certificate has expired. Why?”

Response

You are right. We did not renew the certificate in time after changing certification bodies, and the logo stayed on the website by mistake. We corrected it on [date]. We continue to use our quality management procedures and recertification is scheduled for [date].

Who speaks: Managing director

When to use it: Tender, customer

N-16

 Latent

Shareholder with an untraceable owner

When they ask

“Who is behind your shareholder Alfa Invest Holding and where did the three million come from?”

Response

The shareholder joined the company in 2024 on the basis of [circumstance]. Its beneficial owner is [role and document], and the contribution comes from [origin, documented]. We handed the documents to [whom] and they are available for a check of the origin of funds.

Who speaks: Managing director

When to use it: Investor, bank

N-18

 Latent

Donation to the mayor's party and a municipal contract

Finding on page 12

When they ask

“You donated to the mayor's party and then got a contract from the town without a tender. How are they connected?”

Response

They are not. The donation was made by [company] in [month] for [purpose], the contract was awarded by the town after [invitation] in [month], and the award was decided by [body]. We are happy to present the timeline and the documents. So that such questions do not arise, from [date] our companies do not contribute to political parties.

Who speaks: Managing director

When to use it: Media, investor, audit body

N-20

 Latent

Proxy holder as a subcontractor's shareholder

Finding on page 13

When they ask

“Your proxy holder owns a company you give subcontracts to. Who profits from that?”

Response

Yes, the proxy holder is a shareholder of Beta Sheet Metal. Subcontracts for it are approved exclusively by the managing director, the prices match [comparison with other bids, documented], and from [date] we have a written rule for related suppliers. Over the last three years this concerned [number] contracts worth [amount] in total.

Who speaks: Managing director

When to use it: Investor, public client, media

N-22

 Latent

A customer's contract on Instagram

Finding on page 14

When they ask

“My contract and address were visible on your employee's Instagram. What will you do about it?”

Response

You are right and we apologise. The post was deleted on [date], we assessed the incident with our legal counsel [and notified the authority, fill in according to the assessment]. We have introduced a rule that no documents are photographed on site. We would be glad to meet you in person.

Who speaks: Managing director

When to use it: Customer, authority

What is in order

We looked here and found nothing harmful. You can build on these facts and use them in your responses.

Scope and limitations

What we checked

- 1 Registers and authorities
- 2 Courts
- 3 Media
- 4 Reviews and discussions
- 5 Search and AI
- 6 Technical footprint and security
- 7 Words versus deeds
- 8 Connections
- 9 People and processes

As of which date

We collected the data from 15 to 19 September 2026 in five rounds: every new company, role, address or flow of money opened another round, and the fifth round brought nothing new. All findings are valid as of 19 September 2026.

Who the report covers

This report covers the company. People appear in it only in the roles recorded in public registers (managing director, proxy holder, shareholder) and through their other companies. The managing director's personal part is a separate document that only he receives. We did not check employees.

What we did not do

- We did not use leaked databases, the dark web or purchased data.
- We did not search for people by photo and did not use facial recognition.
- We did not log in to other people's accounts, create fake profiles or pretend to be anyone.
- We did not actively test your systems. The technical part is passive: only public records of the domain and website. We did not try the exposed key and did not record its value anywhere.
- We processed people only in their public roles from the registers (managing director, proxy holder, shareholder) and through their other companies, without their private lives and without any criminal matters.
- We did not check employees or anyone who did not give written consent.

How to read the marks

Critical

Could stop a deal, an investment or a tender.

Verified

We saw it ourselves during this audit and hold a screenshot.

Anyone in a minute

First page of Google, maps, autocomplete, an AI answer.

Latent

Hurts if someone brings it up at the wrong moment.

Probable

Strong indirect evidence, direct proof is missing.

A curious person in an hour

Registers, forums, employer reviews, older articles.

Noise

Weak or old, but shapes the impression.

Unverified

A mention without confirmation. Listed because someone else could use it.

A specialist in a day

Court databases, the domain's technical footprint, archives.

| Limitations    | The report shows what was publicly available on the date of the audit and how it can be connected. We searched in rounds until a further round brought nothing new; what we did not find may still exist. Connections between companies, roles and money are signals with evidence, not accusations. The internet and the registers change, so we recommend repeating the check before meeting the investor. |
| Data retention | We delete working materials containing personal data 90 days after handing over the report. The report stays with you only.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Legal review   | The scope of this audit was reviewed in advance by the processor's attorney.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Prepared by    | MUCSIA, [name and company ID of the processor], [e-mail]                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
